Key Insights

- Mexico continued to set new records in 2018, surpassing the milestone of 400K annual travellers to Canada for the first time and doubling 2015 arrivals in just three years.¹
- The strong arrivals from Mexico through 2018 indicates a continuing positive trend after the initial progress following the changes to visa requirements at the end of 2016.
- Strong direct air arrivals were supported by a 35% expansion of air capacity between Mexico City and Canada in 2018 – the greatest increase in air capacity to Canada of all Destination Canada's international markets.¹³

Market Insights

- In 2018, demand for travel to Canada was highest in July-August (29%) and November-December (20%) among Mexican leisure travellers.⁵
- Activities that Mexican travellers are most interested in experiencing include trying local food and drink, seeing nature parks and natural attractions, the northern lights, fine dining, places of historical and cultural significance and cross-country skiing.⁵
- 55% of Mexicans on their most recent trip to Canada booked an organized group travel package through a travel agent or tour operator, predominantly online.⁵
